

CS1010: Introduction to Information Technology

This course introduces concepts and tools used in the information technology world. These concepts and tools include hardware and software components of computer systems, web technologies HTML and CSS, data processing techniques learned through algorithm and programming development and a brief introduction to office tools (Microsoft Excel).